July 2018
What we do

Arts Council England invests in great art and culture that has an impact on everyone's lives.

That means we use money

...to help make arts, museum and library experiences

...that everyone can enjoy
Project Grants

We can make awards of between £1,000 and £100,000 for things like exhibitions, workshops, shows, research and tours. We call these projects.

The money comes from the National Lottery and anyone aged 18 or over can apply.

If you apply to Project Grants, we will ask you some questions. The next few pages show what we will ask.

Your answers will help us learn what your project is about, who it is for, and if it’s likely to be a success.

The more you tell us about your project, the easier it will be for us to imagine and understand it.
Basic questions about your project

This can be anything you want it to be.

What is your project about?
For example, it might be:
- music, a play, dance, painting, writing

This must be between £1,000 and £100,000.

Tell us the good things people have said about your work, or any awards or qualifications

Tell us more about your project

- Why do you want to do it?
- What will happen in it?
- What will people get out of it?
- Is it based on any ideas or research?

Tell us how doing this project will make you better at what you do in the future
People who will work with you

If you are working with anyone else, like an artist, producer or a curator, tell us about them

- Who are they?
- What will they do?
- Why are they the right person for the job?

For example, you might write something like:

David Wilkes – Performer & sound artist
David has worked in many countries and won awards for his interesting artwork. He will be the main performer in my project.

Rita Aslam - Curator
Rita has been a curator at the Sunderland Museum and she will curate this exhibition.

AVR Design
AVR Design are an experienced virtual reality design company. They will make the video for my show.
Reaching people with your work

Who is your project for?

For example, this might be:

- families and children, or old people
- minority groups in your town
- fans of a certain music type, like jazz or pop
- people who do not get to see a lot of art

How will people see or hear your work?

For example, this might be:

- in an audience at a show
- seeing work in a gallery
- reading a book
- watching a video online
Reaching people with your work

What will your project make people think about or how will it make them feel?

How will you make sure people find out about your project?

For example, this might be:

- sending out flyers and invites
- using social media like Facebook or Twitter
- using a mailing list to email people
- adverts in newspapers, TV or radio
- adverts in your partners’ venues or booklets
The budget for your project

Money going into your project

How much money will you have from other places for your project?

For example, this might be:

• by selling tickets, records or artwork
• other grants, awards or savings
• discounts or volunteers

Spending the money

What will you spend the money on?

How much will each bit cost?

How have you worked out the numbers in your budget?

Have you managed a budget like this before? If you have not, has anyone else who is working on your project?
How you’ll make it happen

Will you work with anyone else to help run your project? If so, what will they do?

For example, you might write something like:

Mind Art – helping me work with disabled people at a workshop

ABC Marketing – helping me contact people to come and see my project

Where will your project happen?

If you’re doing a tour, have you spoken to or booked the places it will happen?

What are the different parts of your project and when will they happen?

Include things like: meetings, research, travel, workshops, shows and time for evaluation.
Finding out if your project was a success

At the end of your project, it is important to find out how it went. How will you do this?

Think about what you said you wanted to get out of your project. Has it done this?

Think about the different people you can ask like artists, audiences or partners…

For example, you might write something like:

- I will ask my partners to answer a list of questions about the project
- I will ask people in the audience what they got out of the show
- I will read reviews of the show
- I will count the number of tickets we sold
- I will write about what I learned and how this can help me on my next project
